January 1, 1747 - April 19, 1775

played by Kassidy Lively

Paul Addams, 28, passed away on April 19th 1775, after taking the bullet that became known as the "shot heard around the world." He took his final breaths riding into the fields of Lexington and Concord, ready to take on the upcoming war. Ever since his first birthday, January 1st 1747, he knew he was destined to ride, which is why he was ready to take the job of hussar very seriously. Loved ones described Paul as ambitiously loyal, but quite stubborn when on his horse. He will be remembered for his duty of warning the people of the red coats on their way. He left us with one final quote that will be remembered forever, "The British are coming!"
